D.C. JUDGE BARS HIPPIE EDITOR FROM CAMPUSES

An editor of the Washington Free Press was ordered yesterday to stay away from area college campuses as he awaits trial for his part in the takeover of a George Washington University building on April 23.

Chief Judge Harold H. Greene of the D.C. Court of General Sessions made the campus ban one of the conditions of pre-trial release for Christopher Webber, 22, of the 1700 block of S Street NW.

Webber, who faces unlawful entry and destroying property charges in connection with the occupation of the Institute of Sino-Soviet Studies at GW, was freed on personal bond. Along with four others, all non-students, he will stand trial June 20.
